Process

This assessment tool can be utilized in many different ways. One of the simplest ways is as a team survey – to establish a current state, future state, and gap analysis.

Current State Analysis

Distribute one sheet per team member. Each person answers every question with a numerical ranking (the current state), and then responds to three qualitative questions:

1. What would you STOP doing that is currently not working well?
2. What would you CONTINUE doing that is currently working well?
3. What would you START doing that is currently not being done regarding this issue?

These three questions/comments identify what changes are requested to get to a “10” (ideal future state). The tactics suggested are proposed solutions for bridging the gap.

Gap analysis

Collate all the responses for each question into a separate category. Distribute all responses anonymously and meet as a team to discuss tactics suggested. Agree on mutual responsibility and ownership of identified issues.

Until you start to see significant improvement, re-distribute the assessment and measure progress (every month or so).

Bottom Line

Any assessment is primarily an excuse to get together and take mutual action. To the degree that you get people involved will be the degree that they are engaged and have ownership of the operation. It is the difference between compliance and commitment and passion.
